Dear Ms. Marie-Jewell,

I am pleased to present you with the Annual Report of the NWT Advisory Council on the Status of Women for the year ending March 31, 1990. The report covers our activities over the past year and makes recommendations for future action by the Government. It would be appreciated if you would table it in the Legislative Assembly.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your commitment to the restructuring of the Council. Your efforts to create a more independent Council have now borne fruit, and I am sure that you join me in wishing the new Status of Women Council a productive and energetic future.

Sincerely,

Katherine Peterson,
Past President.

BACKGROUND

The NWT Advisory Council on the Status of Women Act was passed by the Legislative Assembly in 1983. The first Council met in early 1984. The Women's Secretariat provides financial, administrative and research services to the Council.

The Council's goal is to work towards the equality of men and women in all aspects of life in the NWT. It also provides advice to the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women on issues of concern to women. The Council works towards this goal by doing research, lobbying politicians, networking with other groups, and providing information to the public and media.

There were nine women appointed to the first Council. Since then the number has varied between five and nine. There are now six members who come from across the NWT, from a variety of cultural backgrounds.

The Council's poster series "Women at Work" was officially released in Rankin Inlet in January, 1990. Vice President Edna Elias presents a set to Bernadette Makpah Chairperson of Katasjaq Society.

The members have remained the same over the past year. In addition to the Acting Executive Director, the rest of the Women's Secretariat staff have continued to provide services to the Council.

They are:

Mary McCreadie
Community Worker
Marsha Argue
Information Officer (casual)
Michele Boon
Research Analyst (casual)
Ruth Kaluraq
Administration Clerk
Betty Constant
Executive Secretary

MEETINGS

Regular business meetings were held in June in Hay River, September in Yellowknife and January in Rankin Inlet. Public meetings were held at the same time as the meetings in Hay River and Rankin Inlet, and also in Yellowknife in May. There were excellent turnouts for the public meetings. They provided good opportunities for the Council members to hear directly from women, and for women to learn more about the Council.

Council members also participated in or sponsored other meetings and conferences over the year. Highlights include:

April 1989

- Federal/Provincial/Territorial Advisory Council Presidents' Meeting in Halifax, Nova Scotia.
- Meeting to begin work on a Yellowknife Women's Centre.
- Participation in phone-in show on family violence on CKNM-FM.

May 1989

- Annual Meeting of Hay River Women's Resource Centre.

June 1989

- Workshop on Health Research Priorities.

July 1989

- Social Issues Forum in Yellowknife.

ACTIVITIES & RECOMMENDATIONS

It has been the busiest year ever for the Council. We have continued to work on issues like child care and arts and crafts, and to respond to new issues and suggestions. We have met with MLAs and Ministers as often as possible to put forward a women's perspective on a wide range of issues. The highlights of our activities, along with recommendations to the GNWT, are included here.

Wife Abuse

Women, through their organizations and at public meetings, have identified wife abuse as a priority. The Council has responded by forming a sub-committee on family violence, chaired by Florence Barnaby. This committee, along with the staff, developed a discussion paper called "We Must Take Care of Each Other: Women Talk About Abuse". It was released in March and distributed widely. It is available in both English and Inuktitut syllabics.

The sub-committee members and staff are willing to assist groups in using the paper to help develop community-based responses to this crucial issue.

The Council has also participated in inter-agency work in Yellowknife, and has worked with other groups to lobby for increased funding to shelters and for extension of the GNWT Action Plan on Spousal Assault called "Choices...". "Choices..." expired in 1989 and has not been replaced.

RECOMMENDATIONS

That the GNWT increase its funding commitment to the Family Violence Prevention Program, including funding for new shelters and victims advocacy services;

That the GNWT develop an action plan to replace "Choices....", which involves community organizations as partners with government in addressing wife abuse and other forms of family violence.

Child Care

The Council continues to follow up on the public education and lobby campaign conducted in 1988-89. We have provided information to groups trying to start a day care, and to MLA's. We have continued to provide advice to the Minister of Social Services and to Arctic College regarding training for day care workers, capital funding and the need for a day care policy. A "Report Card" on the government's progress was released during the budget session in March.

RECOMMENDATIONS

That the GNWT establish a pennanent child care program which includes capital, start-up and operating funding for non-profit day care services;

That the GNWT develop a child care policy in consultation with the day care community;

That the GNWT and Arctic College establish Early Childhood Education training on a module, bilingual basis.

Arts and Crafts

We have continued to follow-up on our 1988 research report called "Arts and Crafts: Women and Their Work." Our views have been presented to the Department of Economic Development and Tourism as they developed their Arts and Crafts Strategy. We are still concerned that the social and cultural aspects of arts and crafts, and especially the importance of traditional crafts, are not getting enough attention from the government.

RECOMMENDATION

That the GNWT Arts and Crafts Strategy be amended to recognize the broader social and cultural importance of arts and crafts rather than just the narrow economic role, and particularly women's role in traditional crafts.

Women and the Judicial System

The concerns of women inmates at Yellowknife Correctional Centre were raised this year following an accusation of rape by a women inmate. The Council provided advice to the Minister of Social Services and commented publicly on the need to guarantee personal safety for women inmates, and to provide equal access to programs and opportunities.

The Council has also taken a lead role in commenting on alleged comments on sexual assault by Territorial Court Judge Michel Bourassa. In joint statements with the Native Women's Association and Inuit Women's Association, the Council condemned his remarks, as well as focusing on the broader issues of how women and children are treated by the judicial system. The Council has called for a public inquiry on the more general issues.

RECOMMENDATION

That the GNWT commission a full public inquiry into the treatment of women and children as victims of violence. The commission should examine the appointment process for judges, sentencing practices, victims' services, the relationship among various mandated agencies in dealing with victims and the attitudes of such agencies towards women. It should be able to travel in the NWT and undertake independent research.

Reproductive Choice

This year, the Council took a clear stand on reproductive choice. Members wish to work towards improved access to information and services on family planning, birth control, family life education and therapeutic abortion. We have begun to work with other committed groups towards this goal, including asking the Minister of Justice to advocate the removal of abortion from the Criminal Code.

RECOMMENDATION
That the GNWT improve access to information and services allowing reproductive choice, including birth control and family planning information, abortion referrals and services, and family life education.

Publicity
The Council has raised its profile this past year by communicating more regularly with groups and individuals across the NWT - by phone, fax and mail. Our updated computerized mailing list has helped, along with the installation of our own fax machine.

A multi-lingual poster series on valuing women's work was developed and released at the public meeting in Rankin Inlet in January 1990. It promotes women's work in the home, community and workplace, and portrays women in both traditional and non-traditional roles. It has been widely distributed and free copies in four languages (English, South Slavey, and Baffin and Keewatin dialects of Inuktitut) are still available. We hope to print it in the remaining aboriginal languages and French in the future.

Labour Standards
The GNWT set up a panel to review the laws affecting labour standards and the Council presented a brief. Our focus was on ways to harmonize work and family responsibilities for workers, including suggestions such as flexible working hours, better benefits for part-time workers, leave to look after sick children and other family responsibilities, and extended parental leave. The panel has just submitted its report, and we will be watching for action on the Government's part.

RECOMMENDATION
That the GNWT recognize the need to harmonize work and family responsibilities when amending labour standards legislation.

Five Year Action Plan on Equality for Women
This GNWT Action Plan ended on March 31, 1990 and no plans to continue or expand it have been announced. The Council recognizes the value of a government-wide commitment to women's equality and has attempted to assist by proposing an evaluation of the plan, with recommendations for the future. Our requests to use our research funding for this evaluation have been repeatedly turned down by the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women.

RECOMMENDATION
That the GNWT evaluate the success of the Five Year Action Plan on the Equality for Women in partnership with women's groups and announce a renewed commitment to women's equality in specific areas.

Women in Non-Traditional Careers

A pilot project was started in Yellowknife this year to expose high school girls to a variety of career ideas. A list of women willing to speak in the high schools was developed, along with ideas for promoting discussion. The response from the women was very positive but to date our success has not been as great with the schools. The project will be evaluated at the end of the current school year and ideas for changes or improvement will be discussed.

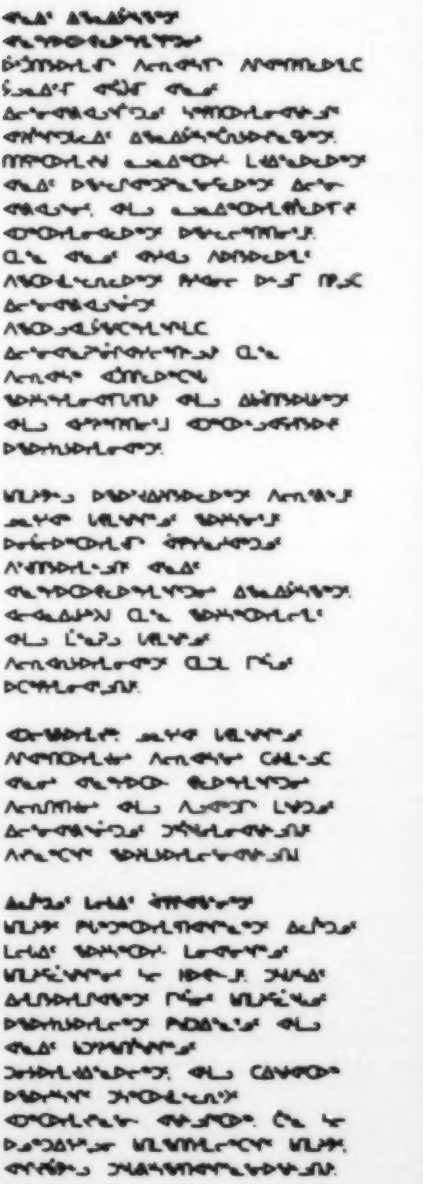
The Council was also consulted by a firm doing a research report for the GNWT on Women in Non-Traditional Trades. We are pleased to see this research being done and will be looking for some action from the Government in the near future.

RECOMMENDATION

That the GNWT take action to promote women in non-traditional roles with particular emphasis on reaching young people through the schools.

Family Law Reform

The Council has continued to be ably represented by Shelley Howell on the Family Law Review Committee. Information about the issues being discussed by that committee has been shared with individuals and women's groups, and their input requested. The Council as a whole, as well as the President, have continued to meet with Shelley to provide direction.



This is seen as a very positive government initiative by the Council, and we are confident that women's interests will be respected as the government drafts actual changes to family law legislation.

RECOMMENDATION
The GNWT release for public review and comment the recommendations of the Family Law Reform Committee with a view to development of appropriate legislation at an early date.

Affirmative Action
The Council was pleased to see the GNWT release an Affirmative Action Policy covering women and the disabled, as well as aboriginal people. Through our participation on the Affirmative Action Advisory Committee, we have raised several concerns with the policy and its implementation. For example, we feel that the inclusion of "non-aboriginal indigenous people" as a target group waters down the effectiveness of the policy. We also do not like the "tiering" of target groups, whereby women are given lower priority than native people, and the disabled are given lower priority than women. The pitting of one group against another is unproductive and does not accurately reflect the legitimate needs of all three target groups.

RECOMMENDATION
That the GNWT revisit its Affirmative Action Policy in order to remove the "tiering" of target groups.

That an ombudsperson's office be created to handle employment equity complaints as well as other matters.

Militarization
This is a new issue to the Council. We have begun to gather information and to link up with other concerned organizations. While in Rankin Inlet in January, we heard the very clear concerns of women in that region about the proposed Kiggavik Uranium Mine. We recognize the links between such mines and nuclear weapons, as well as the links between increasing militarization and the general acceptability of violence as a way to resolve disputes.

We were very pleased to be consulted by the GNWT as they prepared a government policy on military activity in the NWT.

RECOMMENDATION
That the GNWT take firm stands in resistance to increased nuclear and military activity in the NWT and in particular recognize the social impacts such activity has on northern families and communities.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

A great deal of our energy this year has been focused on the restructuring of the Council. Last year, the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women recognized the conflict involved in having the same staff serve both herself and the Council. She initiated a process to create a more independent Council, and received Cabinet approval to proceed in the summer of 1989.

In November 1989, she tabled a draft Status of Women Council Act which would replace the present NWT Advisory Council on the Status of Women Act. This legislation has recently been passed by the Legislative Assembly, and the new Status of Women Council has just been appointed.

It will be able to hire its own staff and determine its own research priorities, while maintaining a reporting requirement to the Legislative Assembly through the Minister.

This is a great step forward for NWT women. The Council will be more free to lobby and advocate on behalf of women, and to respond to their priorities and issues. The conflicts faced by the staff will be gone.

We look to a future involving more outreach to women and their organizations, and more active involvement in issues. We wish the new Women Council well as they work towards our common goal - true equality for NWT women.
